Deliberate. Tactical. Tenacious. These qualities define Joseph's approach to developing and implementing creative strategies to help his clients achieve swift and profitable results.

Resolving complex commercial disputes is Joseph's passion. While articling at a leading national law firm, he gained experience in a broad spectrum of matters, including contractual disputes, bankruptcy and insolvency, construction, employment, negligence, and tax.

Joseph is an accomplished negotiator. In his previous careers in sales and the entertainment industry, he regularly negotiated and closed deals. While studying law at King's College London, Joseph worked as a Teaching and Research Assistant for the Negotiations and Strategic Decision Making modules. In this role, he applied analytical and creative problem solving to simulated legal disputes. In his current practice, he focuses on developing effective negotiation strategies that incorporate strategic decision making techniques.

At law school, Joseph received numerous academic awards, including the Agnes Day Prize for the highest overall results in his first year and the Willie Kwan Scholarship for outstanding academic performance. He regularly competed in moots and was an editor for the Jean Monnet Network LawTTIP, the written contributions to an annual conference on European Law.
